

BIOLOGICAL FRACTURE MANAGEMENT COURSE

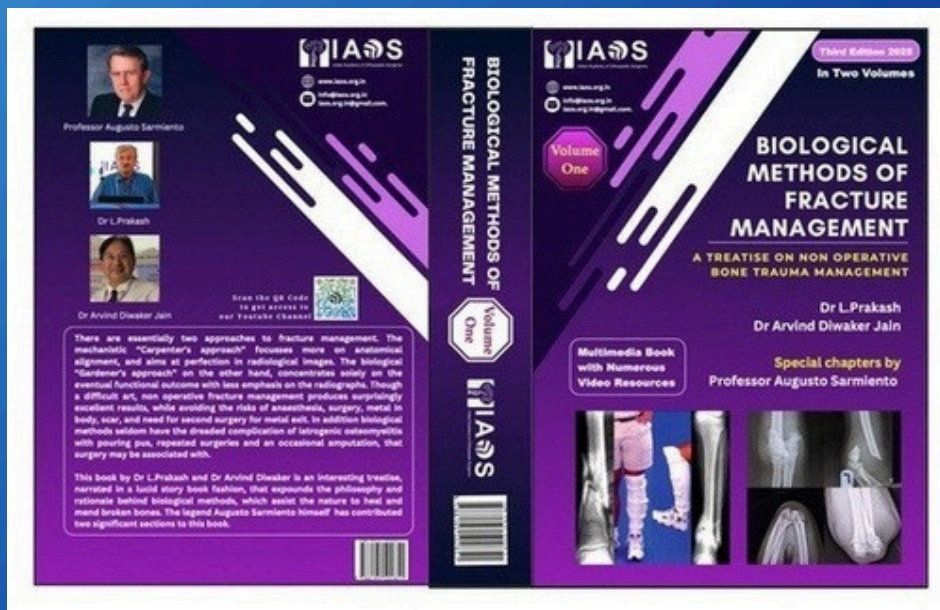

FLEXIBLE SCHEDULE

Course launched in 2018 and is still the most popular course, though it teaches you not to operate

BIOLOGICAL FRACTURE MANAGEMENT COURSE

- There are essentially two approaches to fracture management. The mechanistic “Carpenter’s approach” focusses more on anatomical alignment, and aims at perfection in radiological images.
- The biological “Gardener’s approach” on the other hand, concentrates solely on the eventual functional outcome with less emphasis on the radiographs.
- Though a difficult art, non operative fracture management produces surprisingly excellent results, while avoiding the risks of anaesthesia, surgery, metal in body, scar, and need for second surgery for metal exit.
- In addition biological methods seldom have the dreaded complication of iatrogenic osteomyelitis with pouring pus, repeated surgeries and an occasional amputation, that surgery may be associated with.
